QUALITY

To understand the difference between all types of juice beverages, it's helpful to look at the juice pyramid.

At the top is fresh fruit. Below that is fresh juice—juice from 100% freshly squeezed fruits, which is consumable for 15 minutes before the drink oxidizes. Fresh juice that is subjected to mild pasteurization and bottled under aseptic conditions is what we call direct-squeeze juice.

There is also 100% juice that is reconstituted; this is a beverage made from concentrate and water. Concentrate is produced from juice by removing up to 85% of its moisture under pressure and at high temperatures. Later, to reconstitute the juice, water is added back to the concentrate.

Nectar is also a beverage made from concentrate, but it has a higher water content and added sugars. The fruit content typically ranges between 25% and 50%.

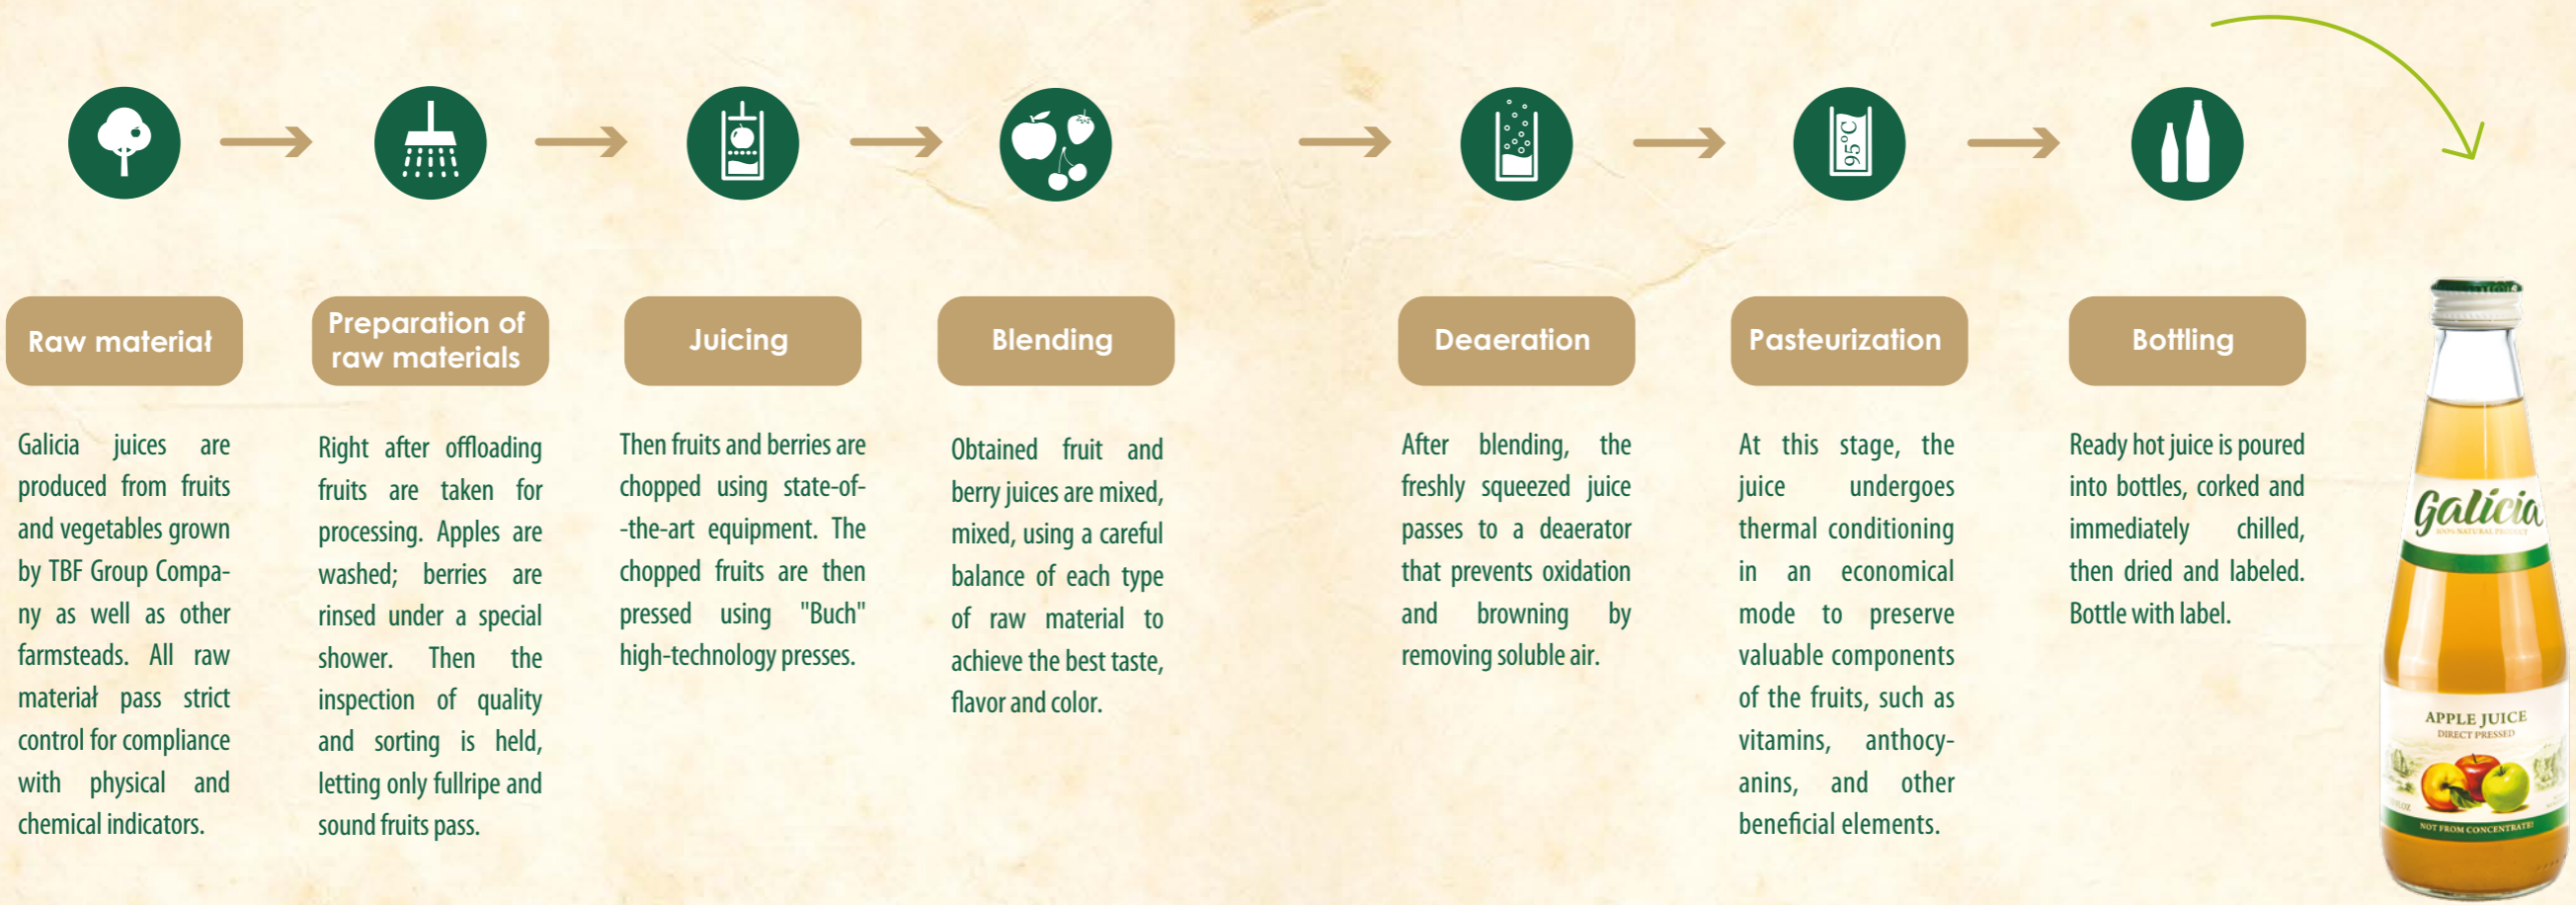

The production of Galicia-Trade LLC is certified according to the international BRC Global Standards for quality. This standard ensures the proper functioning of the entire supply chain, with strict control over safety at all stages: production, packaging, and storage. The product range is also certified according to Kosher standards.

Berry Juice

The berry line of NFC juices offers a perfect balance of flavor and nutrition. The addition of apple juice smooths out the intensity of the berries, reducing their natural acidity and concentrated taste. At the same time, the dominant berry flavor remains vibrant, preserving all the beneficial properties of fresh fruits.
